The newest idea of the imaginative young Mr. Thompson is unique among showman conceptions even from the commercial standpoint, inasmuch as he does not intend to make a cent out of it himself or to permit any other showman or business man to profit by it. But his plan, when in working order, not only will offer financial help to crippled fighting men and the blind, but also, here to lead the children of the greater city and the visiting children from all the fact threatened to mar the wonderful value of the big war vessels: that Jazz. commander in chief of the fleet's masser. But a defunct brew-ery hasn't been altogether passed up by Pred Thompson, breweries having #### cinating nature. German Toys Doomed.

In one of these, car barn or brewery, that has been all made over, will arise the first and only "Principality of Toyland," which the genius of Fred Thompson is confident will become an "institution" to America and a trademark throughout a world of toy "consumers" of far greater power than the one-time slogan, "Made in Germany." No toys will be sold in the fautastic and blissfully delightful principality of Santz, Claus, although tons of toys will be made there annually.

But out of the principality, which is planned to stretch the length and breadth of a city block, will come patterns of toys—which manufacturers everywhere toys—which manufacturers everywhere toys—which manufacturers everywhere that has been all made over, will arise the completed toys how to "act." And—but columns would be completed toys how to "act." And—but columns would be needed to tell of the boat trips in the Glant's washtubs, the pools of liquid gold in the fairies' garden where, right before one's eyes, the dolls come into being on pond lily leaves, the Glant's dining room, now the workshop of Santa, the streat corridor where all the children of the Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe are now making toys.

And at the blissful end one does not go back to earth in an airship; one entered to the principality, which is planned to stretch the length and breadth of a city block, will come patterns of toys—which manufacturers everywhere toys—which manufacturers everywhere to the principality of Santa, the stream of the Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe are now making toys.

And at the blissful end one does not go back to earth in an airship; one entered to the principality of the college of the circust content to the principality of the feet to this port. While the men of the North Dakota are opening the visit of the feet to this port. While the men of the North Dakota are opening to the crowds in Union Square.

Also the principality will be a factory to the extent of "releasing" (for a consideration, of course) movie films for Christmas and other holiday "shows" of childland, the films to be acted by the principality's own stars and midget wonders. Wondrous child books will be designed and principality's own stars and midget wonders. Wondrous child books will be designed and printed there as models for which made his Linna and his Itipoosigned and printed there as models for

By these methods and others too many to list here the "Principality of Toyland" expects to make expenses and more. But to Fred Thomoson who, like the late Biohard Harding Davis

Like most new ideas, Fred Thompon's latest scheme is imaginative to a degree which, at first blush, will cause the countiess descendants of the pioneer in whose honor Marblehead was named to poohpooh it as too fantastic to be practical. But the Marblehead family would do well to remember that they all scoffed when a penniless Fred Thompson, then in his early twenties, auggested the planning and building of a Luna Park at a time when nothing of the kind ever had been thought of before. And the exposition was "made."

Yesterday in Mr. Thompson's apartments at 350 West Fifty-fifth street it was the same great showman who hastily outlined to a reporter from The Sun his plan for "fixing" the toy trade to these United States forever. As he talked his walls glowed with the completed drawings in color which he has recently turned out to show the idea as it will look when finished. LONDON, April 19 .- The first attempt at a transatlantic aerial flight westward came to grief last night in its first stage. Major J. C. P. Wood and Capt. C. C.
